Abstract

The values and ethos of Indian Philosophy have always emphasized on assuring sustainable lifestyle for the well-being of the present and future generation. The key question which perplexes many is whether development is needed to be compromised for assuring sustainability. The present paper is study on how all the nine facets of our needs: Subsistence, Protection, Affection, Understanding, Participation, Leisure, Creation, Identity and Freedom can be fulfilled without hampering the lives of the future generations. The paper gives an outline of how various stakeholders in India like the individuals, government, entrepreneurs, the Non-Government Organisations, the academicians, the media are contributing towards adapting eco-friendly measures to ensure need fulfillment with sustainable lifestyle.
